

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to my family: my dear wife Elvie, and my two delightful children, eleven-year-old PJ and seven-year-old Abigail, for their patience when their husband/father was busy with research and typing. They were reminded that “Daddy can’t play or help with homework tonight, since he has been replaced by the “Thesis Monster”. They also accompanied me on fieldwork for previous unsuccessful thesis attempts in tribal mountain areas of the Philippines.

This thesis would not have been possible without the research assistance and writing help of our Barner Learning Center staff, especially the school executive secretary Eldegrace Fabiana Samson, the SK (Sponsored Kids) secretary Nimfa Yagon, and the discipleship coordinator Inday Betil, who all assisted in the gathering and collation of case study information from the permanent BLC files.

I received invaluable input and patient guidance from my advisor Dr. Heidi Gloria.

Special thanks to the many government officials who assisted by answering my countless interview questions, including especially Councillor Danilo Dayanghiran of Davao City, for access to his voluminous research.

I appreciated the generous assistance of two others of my personal secretaries, Alexander Budo, who kept many of my ongoing school projects and mailings functioning while I was busy with research, and also for our SK Communications secretary Inday Praca, who spent hours at BLC's copier machine, producing thousands of pages of copy (many of which were eliminated later, through revisions), often at a moment's notice.

As always, I value the invaluable advice and direction afforded by my three-member thesis defense panel at Ateneo de Davao University, namely Drs. May Ursos, Gail Ilagan, and Ely Acosta. Also the regular encouragement of Dr. Marlina Lacuesta, and the graduate school secretaries, Ken and Amy.

I am deeply grateful for my supportive and prayerful family at Faith Alliance Fellowship Church of Davao City, Philippines, and especially for the willingness of my FAF assistant pastor, Rev. Callem Betil, who filled in for me in the pulpit when I was preoccupied with research for this thesis and couldn't spare the time to research commentaries and theological journals for sermons.

Finally I'd like to thank the three wonderful American couples who shouldered the financial bulk of my schooling, quite sacrificially on their parts: Lyle and Jill Leonard of New Jersey, Dr. James and Shirlene Isler of Colorado, and my loving parents, Harry and Betty Barner of New York.
